Your abstract should be 300 words or less and written in English.

Please submit your abstract as an MS Word file.

Follow the layout of this template, and use APA 7 name-date format (e.g., Stauss & Ellis, 2007) for any citations or references.

Please use the sections outlined below when submitting your research:

- Introduction: In this section you explain why you choose this particular topic, its relevancy based on a theory, and objectives of your work.
- Materials and methods: Explain place and time of your study, participants involved or data collection methods, the use of software or questionnaires.
- Results: In this block you support your claims with facts, figures, data, while giving logical arguments for its credibility.
- Conclusion: Write why your study or presentation is relevant, how it contributes to the life and achievements of the field. Moreover, explain what theoretical or practical benefits your work brings and what are the main lessons learned.

For theoretical papers, kindly adhere to the sections outlined below. While the order is flexible, ensure that your submission covers each of the specified sections:

- Introduction: Provide context and background for your theoretical paper. Clearly state the problem, research question, or gap in the literature that your theoretical work addresses.
- Theoretical Framework: Present the theoretical foundation or perspective guiding your paper. Clearly articulate the key concepts, constructs, or models that form the basis of your theoretical exploration,
- Methodology (if applicable): If your theoretical paper involves a specific methodology (e.g., literature review approach), briefly describe it and justify its relevance to your theoretical framework.
- Discussion: Elaborate on the implications of your theoretical contributions. Discuss how your work advances existing theories, addresses gaps, or introduces novel perspectives.

For presentations involving experiential work, please adhere to the sections outlined below:

- Introduction: Provide background (theoretical framework or research) and context for your experiential work. State the aim of an implementation of the work.
- Insights: Clearly express and explain the main things you have noticed or learned from your experiential work.
- Discussion: Discuss and carefully look at how your insights connect to the theory or ongoing research. Explore what your findings mean in the bigger picture of existing knowledge, helping us understand how theory and what you observed interact.

Include three to five keywords after the abstract.

You may place an acknowledgment statement and one or two references at the end.

Do not include any figures, tables, footnotes, or endnotes.

Keywords: one, two, three, four, five

Acknowledgment (optional): The authors gratefully acknowledge receiving funding from [funding source, grant number].
